A Colder Modernism: Connections in British and German Modernism

This course will track the evolution of a provocative, if often overlooked counter-modernist tendency within early twentieth-century thought and culture. Rather then look to traditional milieus of Paris or New York, we will study Anglo-German crossovers and collaborations and thus outline the origins of an equally committed, yet more thoroughly critical modernist practice and its continued value for contemporary critical theory. We will consider the ways in which dissident British and German moderns pursued radical theories of aesthetic and political form to confront not only the material changes and attendant social structures brought on by modernization, but also the aesthetic values and practices of their more celebrated contemporaries. In addition to art and literary movement such as Decadence, Primitivism, Imagism, Vorticism, Expressionism, Surrealism, and Bauhaus, we will consider a range of issues pertinent to modernist studies today: nationhood, gender, translation, historicism, humanism and anti-humanism, cultural relativism, technology, cultural transmission, aesthetic politics, etc. Authors will include Friedrich Nietzsche, Ludwig Wittgenstein, T.E. Hulme, H.D., Ezra Pound, Wyndham Lewis, D. H. Lawrence, Robert Musil, Bertolt Brecht, Mina Loy, Carl Schmitt, Walter Benjamin, Siegfried Kracauer, Georges Sorel

Students will be required to complete either two conference-length papers (10-12 pages each) or one longer seminar paper (20-25 pages).

The course will be co-taught by Professors Ed Comentale (English) and William Rasch (Germanic Studies)
